5 JAN 2025

The day started off grey and drizzly, multiple people cancelled and only 4 brave hikers decided come rain or shine they were getting out to stretch their legs.

Within half an hour of walking we all soon realized we overdressed. The sun came out, the humidity rose, and it turned out to be a lovely day for a walk.

The birders of the group thoroughly enjoyed themselves, spotted water birds and multiple grass species. We stopped to admire the amazing skills of the bull weavers, and their beautiful cocoon nests built on the bullrush plants.

Our walk started at the Blackhurst peninsula, went around to the old cascades parking area, then a small backtrack past the Power boat club and up and around to Hoby point.

The last stretch went through Morgenson Campgrounds, and we ended back in Blackhurst.

We all contributed to a scrumptious 'bring and share' lunch under the trees.

What we thought would be a wet and miserable walk rather surprised us into a lovely day out.
